

SONGS IN MY HEAD (by Jack Williams and Donna Mulhollan)

The happy realization that my Muse hasn't abandoned me

Caught between rocks and hard places
Out where the trolley don't run
Where there's nothing at all I see towering walls
And a stone in the place of the sun

Caught between time and the railroad
The engineer calls out my name
With steam in my eyes I hear only "goodbyes"
As the train pulls away, I remain

*Down where the coal turns to diamonds
Dreams trickle up to my bed
Down where the words flow in silence
I'm startled by songs in my head
In my head, songs in my head*

Suddenly dawn comes a-callin'
And breaks like a red chandelier
As the darkness recedes, I pick up the pieces
And fashion a song from my fears

Caught in the light of enchantment
I dance like a child in a storm
Through a hole in the sky shines the Muse's bright eye
And I dream like the day I was born
